Program Notes

i get out., written for basset Kate Alexandra is a sonic enmeshment of American avant-garde and conservative contemporary stylings that explores the dichotomy of self and societal enslavement and freedom. Written for double bass and electronics, the piece draws influence and source material from the words of James Baldwin at his 1969 talk at the West Indian Student Centre in London.

Equipment Needed

- Laptop containing “i get out” Max/MSP patch or stand alone application
- Midi Foot Controller (recommended: IK Multimedia iRig BlueBoard Bluetooth MIDI Pedalboard)
- Vocal Microphone (recommended: Shure SM57)
- Double Bass Transducer Pickup or Clip-On Instrument Microphone (recommended: The Realist Double Bass Transducer or DPA d:vote CORE 4099 with Bass Mounting Clip)
- Stereo Monitors
- Audio Interface (min. 4 channel)
- Mixer (min. 4 channel)

Audio Setup

- Vocal Microphone should go into the laptop
- Double Bass Pickup or Clip-On Microphone should go directly into the mixer.
- 2-channel audio out of the laptop should go into the mixer
- Laptop should be managed on stage by the performer

Performance Notes

- Graphic notation in electronics part are visual representations of electronic gestures.
- Notes marked with an X note head and text, should be spoken.
- All singing should be done in the natural range of the performer, however, pitch class matters.
- In measures 121 and 125, dynamics written at the bottom of the staff are for voice and dynamics at the top of the staff are for bass.
- S indicates the note should be performed as a slap. If needed, listen here for an example.
- Harmonics are notated with diamond note heads representing the node point of the harmonic, specific string the harmonic should be executed on, and the resulting pitch in parentheses.
- Breath marks indicate slight pauses.
- Notes marked as followed should be executed by tapping percussively on the body of the instrument.
